History of Fantasy Football

Fantasy football is a game in which the participants serve as the general managers of virtual professional gridiron football teams. The competitors choose their team rosters by participating in a draft in which all players of a real football league are available. Points are based on the actual performances of the players in the real-world competition. The game typically involves the National Football League, Canadian Football League, American Alliance of Football or college football. There are two main types of fantasy football:

Traditional in which the competition can run either for an entire season or many seasons if it is a keeper league,

Daily, an accelerated version in which the contests are conducted over shorter periods, such as a week or a single day.

Daily fantasy football is managed by commercial internet companies who charge a percentage of each betting pool. In the US, the two largest of these firms are FanDuel and DraftKings.
